What is Dork List?

Google Dorks can reveal some unimaginable information such as email addresses and accounts, login credentials, sensitive data, website vulnerabilities, and even business information (e.g. payment card data).

Here could notice an example to know how Google Darks applied by hackers to reach sensitive data from specific websites.

- "inurl: domain/" "additional dorks

A hacker would easily practice in the desired parameters as follows:

- inurl = the URL of a site you want to query
- domain = the domain for the site
- dorks = the sub-fields and parameters that a hacker wants to scan

The excellent way to use Google dorks professionally is to discover vulnerabilities at your personal website.

We can also practice other search filed than URL that will serve to reveal a bunch of data regarding a website.

Some of the Example :

info: The query [info:] will give some information that Google has regarding that web page. For instance, [info:www.google.com] will display information about the Google homepage. Note there can be no place among the "info:" and the web page URL.

link: The query [link:] will list webpages that hold links to the particularized webpage. For instance, [link:www.google.com] will list web pages that own links pointing to the Google homepage. Note there can be no place among the "link:" and the web page URL.

site: If you add [site:] in your query, Google will limit the results to the websites in the provided domain. For instance, [help site:www.google.com] will find pages of help inside www.google.com. [help site:com] will get pages about help in .com URLs. Note there can be no space between the "site:" and the domain.

inurl: If you add [inurl:] in your query, Google will limit the results to records including that word in the URL. For instance, [inurl:google search] will deliver documents that mention the term "google" in their URL, also mention the word "search" anywhere in the paper (URL or no).

is Google Dorking illegal?
